

BURLINGTON FREE PRESS, FRIDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 17, 1847.

The War.

Nothing new from the War. General Taylor arrived at New Orleans on the 31st, on his way homeward, and was received, as he deserves to be, with the utmost enthusiasm. The gallant old Warrior has been in his duty, beyond it all may. We wish he would visit the Green Hills of Vermont; he would find that admiration for heroic deeds and humane conduct in the hour of victory, is not bounded by geographical lines, in our country.

Congress.

Very little business has been transacted in Congress, thus far, beyond the preliminary organization of the two Houses. We shall commence our regular Congressional Summary next week. The Senate, on the announcement by Senator Niles, of the death of Senator Huntington, of Conn., adjourned over from Thursday till Monday.

The House, also, adjourned from Thursday till Monday.

Another New Market.

Those who make it their special business to cater for those who are indisposed to wants of the community—their "dairy trade"—appear to determine that no external attractions shall be omitted to render their merchandize attractive.—Passing through Cherry street, this week, we observed Mr. DUDLEY PITKIN's New Market House, in the basement of the fine brick building he has erected in that street. Everything within Mr. Pitkin's neat and fully prepared shop is in apple-pie order, and he is fully prepared to supply his numerous and well-satisfied customers with the richest and rarest delicacies in the way of eatables, both flesh and fish. Our readers may remember a notice in this paper, last winter, of Mutton that was too fat for anything, one would think, but a heaven-sent sheep. That Mutton was to be found in Mr. Pitkin's shop, and when we hear or see anything equal to it, we will put down Mr. P. as No. 2—till then, he keeps his place as No. 1.

Mr. EDWARD'S ARRIVALS.

We have had the pleasure of examining some of the numerous beautiful Annuals and Pictorials provided by Mr. Edwards for the approaching Holidays. In topographical execution and in pictorial embellishment, they are superb; while many of them are of standard excellence and popularity in literary merit. We know of nothing rarer, or more appropriate, for enduring beauty, in all that constitutes the essential elements of beauty, for presentation, than the superbly illuminated copies of "Troyer's Seasons" and "Hawkins' Poems." The latter, certainly, have, heretofore, been like the Sibylline leaves—valued and valuable, but which have never been paid for. The price of the former was to be found in Mr. Pitkin's shop, and when we hear or see anything equal to it, we will put down Mr. P. as No. 2—till then, he keeps his place as No. 1.
